

1 DELEGATE CLAGETT: I would say, examine
2 your conscience and cast your vote.

3 THE CHAIRMAN: Delegate Gallagher.

4 DELEGATE GALLAGHER: Mr. Chairman, I yield
5 five minutes to Mr. Scanlan.

6 THE CHAIRMAN: Delegate Scanlan.

7 DELEGATE SCANLAN: Mr. President, fellow
8 delegates:

9 We have heard this afternoon an argument that 10 has raged for about 50 years in the papers, mostly of 11 political science journals, sometimes in law reviews.
12 All the arguments you have heard today have been repeated
13 ad nauseum. I suppose one would have to concede that 14 with one look at logic, purely and simply, that the uni-
15 cameralists might have a logic by a shade on their side,
16 but as Mr. Justice Holmes reminds us in the first page of 17 his volume on the common law, the life of the law has not
18 been logic, it has been experience.

19 I think the life of State government has been
20 the same way, except for aberrational excursion of Nebraska
21 and the background in which it was fully presented by Mr.
